Result

The participants I was able to gather are ten people for the testing. Some of them are in person and some were given a sharable Adobe XD link. The feedback/comments from the testers in regards to the web design received a positive result. Testers were able to perform and finished the task given to them in a timely manner.

In addition to tasks given to the testers, there was also a question that asked the user's age. The reason for such a question is to determine the average age demographics because older people tend to like material design rather than flat design. According to the result, the average customer of Nico is in Millennial Generation. This means that the UI design will not be restricted to material design.
